

Blast Vulnerability Workshop

A hands-on training for educating water supply systems on the vulnerabilities and effects of explosive blasts.

- When: Wednesday, March 7 (8:00AM – 5:00PM)
- Location: The Madison Hotel
1177 15th Street, NW
Washington, D.C.
- Limited Seats: Only 30 utility representatives may participate.
- Hotel Deadline: February 8, 2007

This is the first of three free workshops for water systems that AMWA will coordinate in 2007 on the vulnerability of water supply systems to explosive blasts. Under EPA sponsorship, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will be conducting the workshops, which will cover information about blast effects, vulnerabilities and protection, as well as training with the Corps' Blast Vulnerability Analysis (BVA) tool. The other two workshops will occur in other regions of the country.

- Participants should bring a laptop computer to use for hands-on training with the tool.

To reserve a room at The Madison Hotel, call 202.862.1600. Use Reservation ID AMW73A to get the special workshop rate of $209. The deadline for the special rate is February 8, 2007.

- The workshop will include two coffee breaks. Participants will be on their own for lunch.
- Sign up by faxing the registration form on page 2 to Erica Brown at AMWA at 202.785.1845. If you have additional questions, please email Erica at brown@amwa.net or call her at 202.331.2820.
